

CSCU Student Success Key Performance Indicators:
2017 Community Colleges Report

November 1, 2018

This is the first annual CSCU report on Key Performance Indicators (KPI) for student success.

The CSCU Board of Regents have determined that this report will be disseminated each year to the faculty, staff, and administrators of all CSCU community colleges. The report is presented jointly by the CSCU Student Success Center and the CSCU Office of Research and System Effectiveness.

Why This Report?

Community colleges are measured by long-term indicators such as three-year completion rates. When we focus solely on these long-term measures, it is difficult to determine in the near term whether our educational innovations are effective.

Colleges commonly turn to short-term measures, such as semester-to-semester persistence, to measure the effectiveness of innovations. These indicators provide timely feedback, but they do not always correlate with long-term completion rates.

This report focuses on short-term KPIs that have been demonstrated nationally to correlate with completion. These include measures of credit momentum (attempting 15 credits in the first semester), gateway momentum (passing college-level math and English in year one), and program momentum (passing nine hours in the student's major/area of study in year one).

How to Read This Report

You are receiving this report directly so that you can consider how successful last year's (Fall 2017) incoming class of students were.

Start by looking at the system-wide data on page 1. Notice in particular the five highlighted KPIs (02, 06, 16, 20, and 21), which are especially critical measures. Explore the data for your region, which can be found between pages 2 and 4. Now examine the data for your college between pages 5 and 16.

Be sure to look at the disaggregated data on pages 17 through 19. In particular, spend some time on page 19 to see the vast differences in student success by race and ethnicity. Our system equity goal includes the elimination of achievement disparities among different racial/ethnic groups. What would our data need to look like in order to achieve that goal?

How to Talk About This Report

As educators, we have the opportunity to reflect on this report. The CSCU Student Success Center hopes that this will prompt conversations between you and your colleagues about how policy and practice could be modified to change this data in your area, across your college, and in our system.

As educators, we also have the opportunity to take action. The Guided Pathways and student success work occurring across our system is focused on implementing practices that will improve these measures.
